Their names can be found in the pages of case books and on the sides of law school buildings. They've tried some of the most important cases of the last 50 years, dazzling juries and swaying judges. They've won—or saved—billions of dollars for their clients, and become wealthy men in the process.

They've also represented the guilty and unpopular because they thought it was the right thing to do. They are the lawyers most of us secretly wish we could be, if only for a day.

And now they're in the autumn of their careers.

Dead Bartlit. James Brosnahan. Bobby Lee Cook. Richard "Race Horse" Haynes. Joe Jamail. James Neal. Bernie Nussbaum. These seven lawyers are among the best litigators in America. Strike that. Most of them consider the word litigator an insult. They're trial lawyers. They're all past—in some cases, well past—70 years of age, but when the nation's largest corporations and most important people face serious trouble, they still turn to these seven old-timers. That's because, as the number of trials in the United States seems to be approaching zero, there are fewer and fewer trial lawyers with the experience to take their place.

Says U.S. District Judge Royal Furgeson, who's seen several at work in his San Antonio courtroom: "They represent a breed of lawyer that I fear is on the verge of extinction."

But before they go, they've got some tales to tell—stories that are timeless, provocative, profane and laugh-out-loud funny. And most of them are even true.

Join Loyola CLE and national legal journalist Mark Curriden as he expounds on the legal careers of some of this nation's most successful trial lawyers, three of which are from right here in New Orleans, Louisiana. Curriden will discuss his interviews and subsequent ABA article of seven great trial attorneys from across the country. Hear him tell their extraordinary stories and discover what special characteristics and unique techniques that made them great in the courtroom. After the lecture Curriden will moderate a panel discussion with some of Louisiana's own great trial attorneys, who will be present to share their stories and insights.

Sit back, relax, and learn how it was done back in the day. Class is now in session.
